Families enjoy the dazzling Eid fireworks in Dubai

GULF NEWS ARCHIVES

Eid is the perfect time to create new memories and the upcoming long weekend provides plenty of opportunity to do so. From fireworks at major attractions to family days out, there are a wide range of activities being organised across the UAE this Eid.

Ahead of the big celebrations, we've answered all the entertainment questions you – or the little monsters who run your life – may have. Read on.

Where are the fireworks?

There'll be starry skies across the emirates with firework displays at major venues. Five nights of pyrotechnics are being promised at Dubai Parks and Resorts, from June 27 to July 1. Dubai Festival City Mall, meanwhile, is adding some extra razzle-dazzle, with an immersive laser show on the second night of Eid. Over in Abu Dhabi, Yas Bay will wow visitors with nightly firework shows from June 28-30. There will be sparklers at Abu Dhabi Corniche, Al Mugheirah Bay, Hazza Bin Zayed Stadium and Al Dhafra on June 28, while it's five minutes at Hudayriyat Island in Abu Dhabi the following day.

How can we keep cool indoors?

Once you've ticked off the obligatory mall visits, think about heading over to IMG Worlds of Adventure in Dubai, whose Summerfest Mega Celebration runs from June 24 to September 30. An Eid celebration runs through to July 2, with a PUBG mobile experience, character parades, interactive dance routines, and selfie stops with the park's own resident dinosaurs, Roaming Phoenix, Fairy Wings and Mirror Man to keep your 'Gram game strong.

Extend your journey to the Jurassic era at OliOli's new Dino Quest exhibition. Junior explorers will be able to learn about these prehistoric beasts, search for and dig up dinosaur bones, create and take home new and unique 'fossils'. Tickets also allow entry to OliOli's permanent galleries. From Toshi's Nets to Future Park, there's enough on offer to keep everyone busy.

In Abu Dhabi, meanwhile, kids under the age of 12 get free entry to the theme parks on Yas island – Ferrari World, Warner Bros. World Abu Dhabi and Yas Waterworld – over Eid and all summer-long. Packages are available to book online at Yasiland.com.

Where's the best sporting action?

The UAE's sprawling event venues are transformed into sporting arenas each summer, and this year, events are kicking off in time for Eid Al Adha. In the capital, Abu Dhabi Summer Sports (Adsummer-sports.ae) has 25 indoor courts for most major sports at ADNEC until August 12. Whether it's football or badminton, this is where you can practise your game.

Down the road, Dubai Sports World (Dubaisportsworld.ae) is at the heart of the action, with practice sessions, sports training academies and much more across 42 courts. This year's roster of sports includes basketball, cricket, padel, badminton, football and tennis.

Alternatively, why not make this Eid about adventure? Jebel Jais in Ras Al Khaimah offers a number of adrenalin-pumping attractions. On Jais Flight, the world's longest zipline at 2.83km, you'll be barreling through deep ravines, canyons and through jagged peaks at speeds of up to 160km/h. If that's too fast, try the Jais Sky Tour, which comprises six ziplines ranging from 337m to over 1km in length – it has speeds of a mere 60km/h.

Smaller children will want to try the toboggan-style Jais Sledder. Whichever one you pick, magnificent views of the Hajar Mountains are assured.

Where can I catch a show?

If there's one thing you're guaranteed over the Eid Al Adha weekend, it's a concert to suit your taste. Kick-start the festivities in the capital on June 29 with Syrian actress Assala Nasri, who's bringing old and new hits to the Al Ain Convention Centre. The next day, Rabeih Sager, the hitmaker behind songs such as Ana Ahebbak and Lateman'an, performs at Etihad Arena.

In Dubai, there's an Eid Al Adha double bill at the Coca-Cola Arena on July 1. Kadim Al Sahir brings a playlist of hits from a 40-year career to the UAE, joined by our own Hussein Al Jasmi, whose concerts regularly break attendance records with his fusion of musical genres. The next day it's the turn of singer and oud legend Mohamed Abdo. His music has supplied the soundtrack for every major Khaleeji event, so this is a show you'll want to attend with the entire extended family. Tickets range from Dh150 to Dh295 and are still available on the venue's website.

Or head to The Agenda venue in Dubai Media City for a mix of contemporary pop and traditional Persian melodies with renowned Iranian singer Masoud Sadeghloo live in concert.

On the other hand, if you want to laugh your worries away, there's a fine selection of comedy nights this Eid weekend. South Indian stand-up comic Naveen Richard plays The Junction at Al Serkal Avenue on July 1, while Pretentious Movie Reviews' Biswa Kalyan Rath is bringing his thoughts on romance to Dubai College on the same night.

But there's such a thing as too much family – which is why we're recommending getting a babysitter for the kids while you head out to catch Rob Beckett and Josh Widdicombe on July 3. The English duo behind the chart-topping podcast Parenting Hell are hitting Dubai Opera as part of a show that's been described as a "hilarious cry for help". Tickets via Dubaiopera.com. ■

Celebrations encompass a rich tapestry of traditions

From prayers and family gatherings to festive cuisines and acts of charity, UAE residents share their plans for Eid Al Adha

With Eid Al Adha around the corner, families in the UAE are busy making plans to celebrate the joyous occasion. The feast of sacrifice is a time for reflection, kindness and gratitude. We explore the unique cultural traditions and customs of people from diverse backgrounds as they eagerly wait to observe the festival.

Traditionally, Eid Al Adha is marked by a special prayer and the ritual of sacrifice, says Bangladeshi expat in the UAE Mohammed Rana. "We sacrifice livestock during Eid and share it with three different groups of people: the family, poor, and friends. After that, we usually sit together and prepare our favourite dishes, such as beef curry and falooda, and enjoy these along with other Eid sweets," says Rana.

For Egyptian expat, Hatem El Sayed, Eid is a time to celebrate and uphold family traditions and pass them down to the next generation. "On the first day, we visit our friends and family; sit around food, immersed in nostalgia; and share our memories of Eid celebrations back home.

"After lunch, we usually go out so that the kids can play and the elders can enjoy the fresh air. It's a day to unwind, relax and spend time with family. We also call and wish our family and friends staying far away from us."

Indian expat Abdul Neyas is looking forward to celebrate Eid with his wife and two daughters. While he misses Eid celebrations back home in the south Indian state of Kerala, he enjoys being part of the multicultural celebrations in Dubai.

"Although Eid is celebrated with great fervour in Kerala, they are primarily attended by people of the same community. However, in Dubai, Eid transcends religious beliefs, bringing people from various communities together. We exchange gifts, prioritise kindness and share moments with friends and family. Our family also bond over Eid specialities such as biryani and kunafa," Neyas says.

Similarly, Palestinian expat Amani Zaher also talks about Eid treats and expresses her love for homemade sweets that her family prepares during festivals. She says, "Mamoul, a homemade cookie filled with date, pistachio or walnuts, is a family favourite and we always serve this during family gatherings".

This year, Amani plans to travel to Jordan to celebrate Eid with her family. "Giving Eidi is a unique custom where older relatives and family friends give away cash presents to children and other younger family members," she says.

Dr Khalid Ahmed from Sudan is planning to stay in Dubai during Eid and book a staycation to unwind with his family. "We will visit our neighbours and relatives residing in the UAE on the first day of Eid, then we will set off for a staycation. We also have plans to attend some Eid events that take place across the city."

Syrian expat Maysara Mohammed Sharaf Eddin has lined up some exciting outdoor activities with friends for Eid. "I will go for kayaking and swimming after Eid prayers," he says.

Meanwhile, Emirati legal intern Mariam Al Fardan reflects on the true spirit of Eid. "This is the time to spread joy, donate to people who may be less fortunate, and share our meal with others. Eid Al Adha is the festival of sacrifice and for me, Eid always means happiness, togetherness and sharing. It gives us the opportunity to spend time with family and create new memories."

Businesses go the extra mile to create a memorable Eid shopping experience with spectacular promotions

By Chiranti Sengupta
Senior Editor

As Eid Al Adha approaches, retailers across the UAE gear up to capture the attention of eager shoppers with exclusive ranges, gift bundles, personalised products and unique deals. It is a time when stores go above and beyond to make Eid shopping more than just a task but a joyous adventure. Top retailers share how they pull out all the stops during Eid to create a shopping experience that is not only exciting but also irresistible.

"Eid Al Adha holds great importance for the retail sector, particularly home furnishing. This is a time when everyone prepares their homes for gatherings, giving priority to home decor. People often shop for new curtains, rugs, cushions, wall art, and other decorative accessories during Eid to refresh their living spaces," says Adriana Kostic, Head of Marketing at Pan Home, which has launched a specially curated selection of furniture and decor pieces that perfectly aligns with the festive spirit of Eid.

"Our goal is to provide a wide range of exquisite options that helps shoppers create a warm and inviting ambiance for celebrations. Our collection features a diverse range of elegant furniture and home decor pieces reflecting the cultural influences of the region. We have taken great care to select items that embody the essence of Eid Al Adha, combining tradition and contemporary aesthetics."

Gift-giving made simple

One of the defining aspects of Eid is the exchange of gifts, which reflects the spirit of giving and generosity. During the festive time, people actively seek out gifting options to express their appreciation for their loved ones. To assist customers in their search for the ideal presents, PAN Home showcases a wide range of home decor items, dinnerware, table accessories and home fragrances that are perfect for gifts.

"Home decor items are a popular choice for gifting during the festive season because they offer a lasting and meaningful way to enhance any space," says Kostic. "These items can range from decorative accents to functional pieces such as vases, elegant candle holders, intricate wall art, stylish photo frames, and unique sculptures." Recognising the importance of making shopping more affordable and accessible during this time, most retailers in the UAE strategically launch promotions and deals. PAN Home, for example, is offering up to 70 per cent off on a wide range of furniture and accessories both in-store and online.

"Our customers can benefit from our 0 per cent easy payment plans, free delivery and installations, and the convenience of express delivery within 48 hours for all online orders at Pan Home," she adds.

Perfumes are another top choice for gifting during festivals, as they are considered a thoughtful present. Capitalising on an increased demand during Eid, perfume brands have introduced a wide range of fragrances that cater to different preferences and tastes. Additionally, many perfume brands have started offering creative customisation options, such as engraved bottles, unique scents and personalised packaging, making the gift even more special.

"Rasasi's personalised fragrance experiences enable customers to create custom attars based on their preference. This trend will provide a unique and memorable experience to cus-

SALES SOAR FOR LUXURY BRANDS

Despite economic fluctuations and changing consumer behaviour, the allure of luxury items remains strong, making Eid and the summer break particularly lucrative for high-end brands.

"Clients are actively seeking luxury products that last and are willing to invest to elevate their homes," says Kerrie Black, Group Merchandising and Marketing Director, Sanipex Group, a leading supplier of luxury lifestyle living solutions. "Renowned Italian brands like Lofra, Fhiaba, and Faber offer high-performance cooking and refrigeration solutions while bespoke slab countertops and tables – custom-cut in our Slab Fabrication Facility in Jebel Ali – sets the stage for exceptional hosting. Additionally, there is a growing desire for hotel-style bathroom amenities. Large showerheads and body jets provide a spa-like experience within the home."

Its luxury glassware and kitchen accessories make excellent gifts during Eid. "Sanipex Group is offering 25-75 per cent discount on certain ranges within Outdoor Living, Bathroom, Tiles and Slab, and Kitchen categories across the Gulf," says Black.

tomers during Eid Al Adha," says Sharique Khan, General Manager, Rasasi Perfumes.

While commenting on the key perfume trends during Eid, Khan says, "Buyers often look for perfumes that feature oud as a prominent note. Oud is a highly valued and a sought-after ingredient in the Middle East and often associated with luxury and tradition. Fragrances with floral or oriental notes are also appreciated during Eid. These scents evoke a sense of elegance, warmth, and opulence, making them popular choices for gifting. Some buyers may also choose to splurge on high-end luxury perfumes or agarwood."

Rasasi has launched a selection of special perfumes for Eid. "Our Oud Ma Attar Fransi is inspired by leisurely morning walks in the garden, taking in scents from the leaves, fruits, and flowers, while Oud Ma Attar Patchouli is a sensuously opulent blend of Cambodian oud and rich Patchouli. The newly launched Oud Ma Attar range will surely appeal to a wide range of customers and these are available in brand-new bottles," adds Khan.

Meanwhile, another leading brand Dhamma Perfumes has launched a niche range that incorporates oud, musk and a special Khalta blend for this season.

"It is showing a very promising response from our clients. We also have a unique musk collection comprising Musk Al Tahara, Musk Rose and Fruit Musk. These are the bestsellers during Eid festivities," says Abdul Mateen Dhamma, Founder and Chairman of Dhamma Perfumes, adding, "Dhamma Perfumes is running a special promotion on its three niche launches – Oud 6000, Musk, and Khalta collections, while special offers are also available on the entire musk range." ■

STRONG DEMAND FOR FOOD PACKAGING PRODUCTS

Whether it's a family gathering, community dining or an outdoor picnic with friends, the convenience and ease of disposable serving products and food packaging have made them an essential component of any celebration.

"During Eid, we see an increased preference for aluminium packaging containers, particularly aluminium pots. Additionally, there is a demand for aesthetically pleasing packaging options such as sweet boxes, cake boxes, and gift bags for gifting. Tableware like sofra, cutlery, and premium design plates are also popular for their convenience", says Abdul Jebbar P.B., Founder and Group Managing Director, Hotpack Global, a leading manufacturer of food packaging products in the UAE.

"The market has seen an increase in Eid-themed products, with people actively seeking unique and eye-catching packaging solutions," he says.

Hotpack has an exclusive Eid collection with distinctive designs that align with the festive spirit.

Hotpack Global has also introduced a range of innovative and sustainable products in the UAE to meet customer demand for eco-friendly products. "Our paper cups are now completely recyclable for both hot and cold drinks. We have also developed a bio range of products that can be recycled, with some utilising 100 per cent recycled material," says Jebbar.

REMITTANCES INCREASE AHEAD OF EID AL ADHA

The remittance sector in the UAE has witnessed around 10 per cent growth this year compared to 2022 in several corridors including India, Bangladesh, Nepal, Indonesia, Philippines, and Sri Lanka, says Adeb Ahamed, Managing Director of LuLu Financial Holdings.

"Considering the recent trend of weakening of currencies in Asian and other emerging markets, as well as due to the upcoming festive season of Eid Al Adha, we are expecting significant growth in remittance numbers this month in key corridors like India, Bangladesh, Indonesia, Sri Lanka, Pakistan, and some African countries," says Ahamed.

To encourage expats to remit more during Eid, LuLu Exchange has rolled out unique promotions. "We are offering all LuLu Exchange and LuLu Money app customers an assured gift of three months' free subscription to Viu OTT platform worth Dh60," he says. "Additionally, those who are remitting more than Dh5,000 to India will receive a free two-night-and-three-day holiday with their family in Club Mahindra properties in India. This offer is valid until June 30."

Trends to try this summer

Welcome the Eid break with some of the hottest makeup styles

Face this season with a fresh outlook! Update your makeup palette with fascinating eyeshadows, bold lips, glowing cheeks and strong brows. Try one new trend at a time and you'll have a whole new attitude to welcome the Eid break. Here's what trends are making the biggest buzz in summer:

Luscious lips

If you only change one thing in your makeup routine this season, make it your lip colour. From velvety corals to hot fuchsias to barely-there pinks, there are plenty of choices for every preference. Just try a change — or two or three!

Dramatic eyes

Whether you prefer sugary pastels or powerful primary hues, make your eyeshadows contrast with neutral skin and nude foundations to give them even more impact. Stick to pale lips when wearing electric eye shades and to pastel shadows when wearing bolder lips. The colour of the moment? A swipe of cobalt blue.

The new smoky eye

The smudged smoky eye is alive and well, especially accented with black-as-black mascara and eyeliner. But the newest smoky looks layer "desert sunset" colours such as burgundy, coral, copper and gold.

Glittering metallics

Whether it's chrome, metallic, or a sheer wash of shimmer, sparkle will be back in a big way this year. You can wear it in so many different ways. Do a soft wash of sparkle across your eyelid or up the ante with a straight up metallic liquid.

No-makeup makeup

With all this colour bursting out of cosmetics collections, it's no wonder that when it comes to foundation, makeup artists are toning it down. Sheer loose powders are brushed on for a translucent fresh face — the perfect backdrop for drama on the eyes and lips.

The wet look

Dewy glowing skin is getting a jump-start on bronzed summer makeup. "Glassy" skin is achieved with tinted serums, cheek gels and glossy lip colours. Book an appointment with a facialist or use one of the many face-massaging beauty tools on the market to get your glow going now.
